EIGHT GRADE SCHOOL BUILDINGS ARE FIRE TRAPS SAYS SURVEY

Teachers Are Paid Salaries That Are Too Low, Classes Are Too Large and Three Buildings Are Unfit for Use—Vocational Survey Should be Made Public.

The eighth installment of the Promotive Survey of Kingston, setting forth school conditions in the city as viewed by those who made the survey, follows:

Public Schools.

The facts in this report on the public schols of Kingston are given in comparison with conditions in other cities of the United States. With the help of these comparisons it can be clearly seen where the public schools of Kingston excel and where they are in need of improvement.

This report will deal principally with salaries, training and experience of teachers, health service, attendance and size of classes, receipts and expenditures, board of education and buildings.

Salaries.

The strength and service of our schools is measured by the quality of the men and women who are engaged in teaching. Salaries which provide a comfortable living and opportunities forprofessional study and training will induce men and women of ability to become teachers. They will have assurance that their ability and extra efforts will be rewarded. The equality of instruction is the most important element of our school system. Just so long as salaries are low, the teaching profession will not attract the most competent teachers in large numbers.

Kingston paid a median salary to elementary school teachers in 1920 of $909, and today the salary is $1,150. This present salary is low, but the general increase during these last years has kept pace with average salary increases throughout the United States.

The legislature of 1919 enacted Chapter 645 of the Laws of 1919, entitled, "An act to amend the Education Law, relative to the salaries of members of the supervising and teaching staff in the cities of the apportionment of school moneys to cities and school districts and making an appropriation therefor."

Section 882 of the law makes it the duty of the board of each city of the state to adopt by laws fixing the salaries of all members of the supervising and the teaching staffs of the schools of the city. This law not only provides a schedule of minimum salaries, but also a certain annual increment and prescribes the minimum number and amounts of such increments. The purpose of the law is to raise the level of compensation for teachers' services in public schools of the state. It is deemed that the rate of compensation for teachers in nearly all of the cities is below that required for reasonable living conditions, and such salaries should be raised as rapidly as is consistent with fiscal conditions in the cities of the state. There is nothing in the law to prevent a greater number of annual increments than those prescribed or an increase in the amounts. It is not necessary to give here the salary schedule, but only to note the intent of the law to fix the minimum salary and provide as rapidly as possible for more adequate compensation for teachers' services, and further, to bring about a uniformity of the minimum and maximum of salaries and annual increments as between cities which are near to one another and subject to competitive conditions.

The median salary paid in American cities to women elementary school teachers in 1920 was only $1,154. Since that time there has been some increase, but it is not known accurately.

The following table gives the highest median salary paid in 1920 to elementary school teachers in the Eastern States, Great Lakes States, Great Plain States, Western States and Southern States:

Although the per cent of increase in the salaries of teachers of the elementary schools has been over 61 per cent since 1913-14, it must be kept in mind that the salaries paid at that time were very low. Even with this increase, the nation began the year 1920-21 with a shortage of 90,000 adequately trained teachers. The average salary today represents a low standard and until it is increased, the best students graduating from our colleges will not be attracted to the teaching profession.

In the salaries which are paid to superintendents and to principals there is small recognition of administration ability. Those holding these positions are called upon to manage an intricate organization and yet a very small per cent of them are paid salaries which place them in the executive class. The schools will experience a marked shortage in these positions unless the competition of the commercial field be met.

Kingston pays the superintendent $3,600 and the principals of elementary schools $2,000 a year. The median salary paid in cities of the size of Kingston to high school principals is $2,209.

It is interesting to note that the average janitors' salary in the cities of the United States is $1,087, as compared with that of the school teachers' $1,154.

In this review of the salary situation in the cities of the United States, it is evident that if Kingston is to keep the pace with other progressive cities of this country, she will have to provide in the near future for higher salaries. There will be a constant increase in teachers' salaries in American cities until a high standard of instruction is established in our public schools. A salary of $1,600 will not compete with the business field and invite the brightest graduates of our colleges into the teaching profession.

Training and Experience.

It is a commonly accepted standard among city Boards of Education that the teachers of elementary schools should be at least graduates of State Normal Schools which means a two-year professional course after graduation from a four-year high school. Fifty per cent of the teachers have had less than six and one-third years of training beyond the 8th grade. It is patent to anyone that this training and education is the very least that could be required of a teacher. The median number of years of training of elementary school teachers in Kingston in six years, and of high school teachers eight years.

The range of experience of elementary school teachers in cities of the size of Kingston is 8-19 years. One-half of the teachers of Kingston have had 20 years of experience. Experience in and of itself is valuable. There is a period, however, when experience ceases to produce improvement without conscious effort on the part of the teacher. Teachers find they must attend summer sessions at Normal Schools or special courses at Columbia College and elsewhere. This takes money. Salaries paid teachers must be large enough to pay the cost..

Attendance.

The attendance in elementary schools of Kingston for 1921-22 was 2,656 as compared with the attendance in 1913-14 of 2,682 showing a decrease during these eight years of 26 pupils, as against an increase in all cities of the United States of 21 per cent.

During the years 1913-14 to 1920-21, (more recent figures are not obtainable,) senior high schools made rapid growth showing an increase of 39 per cent. Part of the gain in junior high school attendance has been at the expense of the senior high school. Practically all of the ninth grade pupils were reported as senior high school pupils in 1913-14, but last year many of this grade were attending junior high schools. The per cent of increase in the attendance of the senior high school during the last seven years has been 14.9 per cent as against that of the cities of the United States of 39 per cent.

Size of Classes.

Forty per cent of the classes in the elementary schools of the United States have forty or more pupils to a class. Authorities agree that these classes are too large. Teachers cannot do their best work with groups larger than thirty-five.

The elementary schools of Kingston have 68 classes of more than 35 pupils each. Of these, five classes are from 40 to 44 pupils each; three classes, of from 45 to 49 pupils each. In the high school there are 68 classes of from 35 to 39 pupils; 60 classes of from 40 to 44 pupils each; 20 classes of from 45 to 49 pupils each.

Buildings.

The school buildings of Kingston are being used to their full capacity. Three of the school buildings are unfit for use. With these conditions continuing, the effectiveness of the school system will be greatly impaired unless additional provisions are made.

In the recent national survey of urban schools, it was found that one-half of the elementary school buildings located in some 400 cities of the United States were constructed before 1897. These buildings are old in construction and design. They are comparatively small buildings without auditorium or gymnasium, the class rooms are badly lighted, children are subjected to eye strain, the old system of ventilation leaves the air foul and warm air is not properly introduced. It is difficult to over-estimate the hy-

JUDGE SETS ASIDE SPELLMAN VERDICT

Jury Found That Spellman Was Incompetent but the Court Was of Opinion That He Was Only Mean.

The Spellman will contest case will be tried again.

The jury which heard the evidence in the case retired to the jury room shortly after 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon after the case had been summed up on the part of the contestants by Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., and by Frank W. Brooks for proponents. Before retiring three questions were submitted by the court for the consideration of the jury. These questions in substance were:

Was Richard T. Spellman on the date the will was executed of sound and disposing mind and memory and capable of making a will?

This same question was submitted in regard to the two codicils which were later added to the will.

All three of the questions were answered by the jury "No." The jurors were confined to the jury room until about 9 o'clock Wednesday evening before an agreement was reached and at the opening of court this morning a sealed verdict was handed up.

After receiving the verdict of the jury, Mr. Brooks moved to set aside the verdict on the grounds that it was against the weight of evidence and contrary to the testimony in the case and on the usual grounds as specified by the code. This motion was granted by the court.

Argument on the part of contestants and proponents followed and at the conclusion of argument Ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier asked on the part of the contestants that a new trial be granted. Motion for final disposition of the case was denied and Judge Rosch granted the motion for a new trial.

Before granting the motion for a new trial Judge Rosch stated that his reason for setting aside the verdict of the jury was that after listening to the case he had come to the conclusion that Mr. Spellman was not crazy at the time of the drawing of the will but was a type of mean man sometimes encountered. In setting aside the verdict of the jury he did so with the belief that Mr. Spellman was capable of making a will and that his acts were those of a mean type of man and not a crazy man. He was of the opinion that if Mr. Spellman was sufficiently sane to be dragged into court on a separation action brought by his wife he was of sufficient mental capacity to make a will. The fact that Mr. Spellman realized that he had a son and that he remembered his son in making the will and that he realized that his wife had secured an order of separation and thereby disinherited her was evidence of his mental capacity.

Judge Rosch also stated that he evidently was of sufficient mental capacity to realize that his daughter was taking the side with her mother and that probably for this reason she was left nothing; in his mind this was evidence that Mr. Spellman realized what he was doing when he drew the will. He classified the act on the part of Mr. Spellman as an act of a mean man rather than a mentally deficient being. This type of man he held was capable of drawing a will and disposing of his property.

Proponents asked that the case be sent direct to the appellate division for trial and in this way save unnecessary litigation and cost and offered to pay the cost of printing the case on appeal. If this action were taken and the appellate division held that there was an issue of fact, the case would be sent back for a new trial. Contestants opposed this motion and asked for a new trial.

By the decision of the court in granting a new trial the case will have to be retried at some subsequent term of court.

MORGANSTERN BECOMES MEMBER OF $100,000 CLUB

Mannie Morganstern, who formerly conducted the Popular System of Bakeries in this city and who after selling out to Everett's bakery entered the employ of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, has been awarded a "$100,000 badge" by the Metropolitan Insurance Company. Every agent who sells during a year $100,000 in policies is awarded one of the badges and this is the first time that one of the badges has been awarded in Kingston. Mr. Morganstern has been employed by the Metropolitan Insurance Company but three months and in that time has sold over the required amount of new insurance. In addition to becoming a member of $100,000 Club he led all agents in New York state recently in weekly business, having written more insurance during the week than any other agent in the state.

QUITS BOATING AFTER 50 YEARS

Captain Hoff of Athens Terminates 53 Years of Boating By Sending His Resignation to Cornell Steamboat Company—Captain of Hartt For 20 Years.

In sending in his resignation to the Cornell Steamboat company, which he did last week, Captain Benjamin Hoff, Sr., of Athens, rounds out fifty-three years of steamboating on the Hudson river. Captain Hoff is 81 years old, but does not retire because of ill health. He is vigorous and alert in every way and only leaves his lifelong occupation because of the ill health of his wife. He began his career with the Knickerbocker Ice company in 1870, serving on the tugboat Diamond. Five years later he entered the employ of the A. C. Cheney Towing line, and acted as captain on the largest tugboats including the A. C. Cheney, for seventeen years, he became connected with the Cornell Steamboat company by the merging of the two concerns. For the past twenty years he has been captain of the Hartt, plying the lower waters of the Hudson.

Captain Hoff's resignation closes a remarkable record, in which faithfulness and efficiency have been outstanding features. His host of friends on land and water wish him the many happy years of leisure he deserves.

There has been a unique program arranged by the committee to supplement the ceremony of the crowning of the queen. There has been a change in the plan of other years, in that this year the entire program will be held out of doors. The throne will be located on the knoll in back of the school. This will undoubtedly add a great deal to the spirit of the day.

The program will start at 10 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

TROLLEY STRIKE AT SCHENECTADY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Schenectady, May 17.—With every trolley car locked in the barns and the Union street car men prepared for a long fight, thousands of residents of this city walked to work this morning. Not a car wheel turned after midnight last night.

Refusal of the Schenectady Railway Company to recognize the union or submit the differences to arbitration, resulted in the tie-up. The vote to strike was almost unanimous.

Although the men have protested ever since their wages were cut five cents an hour last winter, the real reason for the strike is the refusal of the company to recognize or deal with officers of the car men's union.

Between 500 and 600 men are out. The strike also ties up the company's line from this city to Albany. The strikers are aiding in the organization of a jitney service.

TWO AUTOS DAMAGED AT SAME STREET CORNER

It was reported to police headquarters Wednesday evening that the automobile of Alfred Trendle of Rosendale ran into the trolley crossover at St. James street and Clinton avenue that evening, blowing three tires and breaking an axle. The same evening the car of C. Brandow of Hunter ran into the cross-over and blew out a tire and otherwise damaged the car. The trolley road is having the cross-over repaired and the excavation was said to be protected by red lanterns.

PRISONER INVOKES SUNDAY LAW

East Kingston Negro Seeks Liberty on Ground That He Could Not Be Sentenced on Sunday.

Philip Rogers, colored, who was arrested on May 13 at East Kingston on a charge of disorderly conduct and who was sentenced to serve a term of 180 days in the county jail by Justice of the Peace Michael DeCicco, seeks to be released from jail on a writ of habeas corpus, claiming that he was arrested and sent to jail on Sunday and that this was contrary to law. Chris. J. Flanagan appeared for Rogers and District Attorney Traver appeared on the part of The People.

The writ was argued before Judge Rosch in supreme court Wednesday afternoon and at the conclusion or argument Judge Rosch dismissed the writ. Judge Rosch held that he had no juricdiction in the matter and allowed the applicant to make application to the county court.

Rogers claims that he was sentenced to jail on Sunday and that in addition the judge in sending him to jail for 180 days exceeded his authority. At the time Rogers was arraigned in court he entered a plea of guilty and the sentence was consequently imposed.

According to the law, a prisoner may not be tried on Sunday in a court unless the court has special jurisdiction which allows trials to be held that day. However, District Attorney Traver held that Rogers was not tried on Sunday but when arraigned in court entered a plea of guilty and that the law makes provisions for sentencing a man where he voluntarily entered a plea of guilty when arraigned on Sunday.

Judge Rosch held that he had no jurisdiction and could not set aside the sentence or reduce it and consequently dismissed the writ.

APRIL POOL PRICE FOR MILK HIGHER

The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., announces a gross pool price for April milk of $2.15. Deductions for miscellaneous expenses amount to $.07½ which makes the net pool price for April of $2.07½. This price is for 100 pounds of milk testing 3 per cent butter fat at the 200 and 210 mile zone. The price which individual poolers will receive will vary according to the butter fat and freight differentials applying in each case.

This pool price of $2.07½ is $.74 higher than the pool price for April, 1922, which was $1.33½. This means that the farmers of the Pooling Association will receive for the 281,218,416 pounds of milk delivered in April $2,121,016.28 more than they would have received for the same quantity of milk had it been delivered a year ago. In spite of the fact that it is the beginning of the flush season when the quantity of milk becomes greater and the price tendency has always been down, the April pool price for pooling dairymen is only $.05½ lower than the March pool price. An encouraging feature of the association report is the fact that a larger proportion of the total quantity of milk marketed by the association has been handled through the league owned plants and especially in the higher classifications, namely, fluid milk, ice cream and canned milk, which returns higher prices than the butter and cheese operations. The association is now making very little butter and cheese because of the increasing demand for the other products.

The report on the association sales of milk and milk products for the month of March shows a total increase of over $1,000,000 over the sales for February and about $1,500,000 increase over the sales for March, 1922.

I'd note the higher it ascends,
The crookeder it grows.

Sigrid Onegin created a sensation as a new member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Her voice has the glorious richness of tone looked for in great contraltos. Like other artists of the New Hall of Fame she selected Brunswick to immortalize her voice because of its faithful interpretation of the difficult tones, its clearness and brilliant interpretations. Mme. Onegin gives the two beautiful Brahms selections a rendition full of glowing color and rare loveliness of expression. Be sure and hear them.

New Brunswick Records are now issued every day. They can be played on any phonograph but best on The Brunswick.

CREPES IN FAVOR

Material Holds Lead for Dress; Last Word for Dressy Coats and Chio Wraps.

It is easy to deduce that crepes are still at the top of the line as far as spring garments are concerned. They lead for dress, both daytime and evening wear, and represent the first and last word for dressy coats and wraps, says the Dry Goods Economist. For the three-piece they create at least half of the design, and later we may confidently look for the three-piece made entirely of crepe. Flat crepes are most often used. Crepe romain makes very distinguished looking dresses and coats. Crepe satins are, if anything, a little stronger, especially when the bright and dull sides are used in contrast.

Printed chiffon rivals the printed crepes and makes beautiful gowns all by itself or assists other materials to the same end. Georgette crepe retains its place in the mode, more as a staple, however, than as a fashion item.

For evening taffeta enjoys its usual distinction, both shot and changeable varieties, very exquisitely carried out in the matter of detail and decoration. Even black taffeta has appeared for a dinner gown, in association with fine ecru lace and hand work.

With few exceptions, the white crepe dress with plaited skirt and plain bodice and pocket and plastron trim is shown as the approved type for spring. Sleeves of these dresses are either long and in bishop style, or stop a good four inches above the elbow.

Monogram embroideries and pockets on both bodice and skirt are emphasized.

White gowns embroidered in black or in color, such as scarlet or emerald, are well spoken of, the embroidery being introduced in monogram effect on the bodice, and in all-over design on the pockets.

With these gowns are shown smart little sleeveless coatees in black or in bright-colored wool velours or silk velvet.

Coats, in either suede or glazed kid, are in demand for motor and for rain garments. Suede trimmed raincoats in rubberized crepe de chine are also features.

In neckwear, matched sets of lingerie collar and cuffs, with deep berthas in net, in lace or in organdy, stand out as the leading features for spring. Plaited stoles on the clerical order also are featured, and are being brought out for wear with the new square-cut neck finish.

Numerous matched sets consisting of wide collars with gauntlet cuffs made of plain linen, of embroidered net, or of organdy, lace-trimmed and embroidered with metal, are shown.

Snaps Convenient on the Kiddies' Hair Bows

The snap or hook and eye, which this season has aided the clever woman to transform one hat by using several trimmings, and to make one dress change its looks and charm in a second by the simple exchange of girdle or trimmings of ribbon, is now appearing on the hair bands for little girls. The hook and eye, or the snap, may be attached to the ribbon where it meets in the back under the hair of the curly-headed child or under the bow where it is well hidden. The snap-on hair band saves the breaking of the hair which often catches in the knot and also prolongs the life of the ribbon by saving the untidy mussiness that tying and untying produces.

Combination of Red and Blue Is Effective

This is an appealing combination of red and blue, the overskirt of red girdled in dull silver jewels. A small hat of red "chip" is massed heavily with red currants which droop over shoulders in fashionable manner.

The Famous Rosetta Stone.

The famous Rosetta stone, now in the British museum, was found by an officer in Napoleon's army. It was not until 1822 that Chapollion, the French scholar, translated the Greek text that formed a key to the hieroglyphics.

DOMINE CHASE OPENS HIS QUESTION BOX

An open letter to Hon. Simon B. Van Wagenen.

Hon. Simon B. Van Wagenen,
Dear Sir.

The temperance people of this county would like to be informed why you voted to repeal the Mullan-Gage law.

You knew that under the local option law, nearly all the towns in the county voted dry, and the wet majorities in the other towns had nearly reached the vanishing point, so that the vote of the county taken as a whole, was dry. Why then did you not represent the majority of your constituents?

Awaiting your answer, I am,
Very truly yours,
P. N. CHASE,
Secretary Citizens League.

In its report of the Rotary dinner at Catskill on Tuesday evening the Catskill Mail says: President Coffin had all the Catskill Rotarians stand up, so that visitors might see what a pulchritudinous lot represented the local organization at the starting point of the Rip Van Winkle and Mohican trails. The inspection seemed to make a big impression. However, Kingston claimed the honor of sending the real "Rip Van Winkle" representative of the occasion in President Fessenden, of that body.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MAY 17, 1923.

Federal Judge Knox, of New York, has declared void that part of the Volstead act which limits the amount of liquor a physician may prescribe. If sustained by the Supreme Court, this decision will do justice to both the honest physician and his patients. It may also bring into existence many quacks eager to write whiskey prescriptions at wholesale and high rates, but we have other laws wherewith to deal with these.

The distribution of the 122,519 lawyers in the United States is hardly such as one would expect. New York has 18,473 of them and Illinois ranks second, with 8,843. With a larger population than Illinois, Pennsylvania has only 6,784. The lower South has the fewest lawyers in proportion to population and the Pacific coast region has the most; California having a lawyer for every 507 persons and the other states of that section making a similar showing. Nevada is conspicuous for one lawyer for every 337 persons, temporary residents seeking divorce being the explanation. But the greatest crowding of lawyers is in the District of Columbia, Washington boasting one for every 181 persons.

DULY WARNED.

The Supreme Court made trouble for our government when it recently decided that, under the Volstead law, foreign ships may not come into American ports with liquor on board, no matter how securely that liquor is sealed when the vessel is within the 3-mile limit, notwithstanding the laws of foreign nations compelling sea captains to supply wine rations to crews, and notwithstanding our treaty provisions against interference with the ordinary rules of foreign vessels while in our ports. It had been hoped that the Volstead act might be amended in recognition of these foreign laws and our non-interference treaty provisions. Secretary Hughes wanted such amendment to prevent perpetual and irritating diplomatic complications. Secretary Mellon wanted it to save his agents from virtually useless effort. Secretary Hoover wanted it because the lack of it is "bad for business." President Harding wanted it for the sake of peace.

But Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League, hailing the inconvenient decision of the Supreme Court with satisfaction, puts the government heads and the world on notice that it can not be. International comity and foreign complications are nothing, the prohibition principle is everything. Any politician who questions this is an open ally of rum-hounds, bootleggers and traitors; he is not fit for any responsible office, let alone that of the president of the United States. So there you are.

PATRIOTISM AND FASHION.

Queen Mary is said to have notified the Marchioness of Curzon that English noblewomen must get their costumes in London and not in Paris. Presumably the Queen wishes to stimulate home industry in hard times, and no doubt the dressmakers of London are much gratified. But it may well be doubted whether pleasure has been given in any other quarter or whether the Queen's wishes will be to any large extent respected. Queen Mary has not been successful as a leader in matters of dress. When other women were wearing gowns that fitted their persons with glove-like snugness she indicated that she was scandalized and heroically appeared in public in "old fashioned" wide skirts, but all she succeeded in doing was to cause her "lonely grandeur" to be lonelier than ever.

Her prospects of success in the present instance are not much brighter. Compared with the power of fashion, royalty nowadays is but a feeble make believe. Fashion rules despotically and the French "Modes" have the undisputed right of way. It seems to be impossible to order it otherwise even in war time when patriotism is a continuing flame. During the war the German government failed in its effort to induce German women to ignore French fashions. It could not be done. Paris "modes" came in via Switzerland right along. Acting on an impulse similar to that of Queen Mary, William II once tried to keep French champagne out of Germany, but even Bismarck, when urged to drink the German article as a patriotic act, curtly responded that his patriotism stopped at his stomach. Queen Mary may as well learn now as later that the patriotism of British women and perhaps all other women stops at their clothes.

2. What do butterflies live on and how long do they live?

3. Does the condition of the soil affect bird life at all?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Is there any way to transplant seedlings so they won't droop?

Dig a group of them up with enough soil not to disturb their little roots. Stand the clump in a pan of water and in a moment the individual seedlings can be gently lifted without tearing their roots at all. Have little holes in which they are to set made beforehand, pour water in each as you set in the seedling, push in dirt to make a liquid mud that will embrace the roots gently, and press dry dirt firmly at the top. Shade for a day or so, and they will not know they have been moved.

2. Is there any book or pamphlet giving the closed season for the fur bearing animals?

You will get a fair condensed statement in Fur Traders and Fur Bearing Animals by M. Petersen, under a heading "Restrictions" at page 72. For your own state, apply to its department of agriculture for a copy of fish and game laws.

3. Why do some birds have so much bigger eyes than others?

Leaving out the natural increase in size of eye you would expect as the size of the body increases in some species, it is true that certain small wood birds do seem to have eyes proportionately larger than their body size suggests as natural. One theory is that some thrushes and warblers, whose feeding habits and dispositions keep them in deep woods, have larger eyes than similar species that feed and live in more open situations, because those living in dim light require larger seeing organs.

ROAD BUILDING

ROAD CLASSIFICATION URGED

Necessary in Order to Carry on Successfully Highway Program in This Country.

That a public road-building policy requiring road classification according to function as well as responsibility for construction and maintenance is necessary in order to carry on successfully a good roads program in this country, is the gist of a treatise issued recently by the Nebraska department of public works, on "How to Get Good Roads." The classification policy, the Nebraska officials point out, has been found upon adoption abroad to be a highly successful one for highway improvement.

"That which has secured roads overseas," says the bulletin, "should secure them here. First: There is the country road. Its primary function is to serve county needs. While its function is vital—linking farm and market—its use is nearly local. The county, therefore, should assume responsibility for it. It should be built and cared for by the county funds. Exception should be made of certain roads in the counties whose function places them in another class—that of state or federal roads. Second: There is the state highway, the aggregate of which constitutes the state highway system. These are the roads which, while serving local needs in the counties, have for their primary function highway service to the state as a whole. The system is usually planned to connect the county seats, and all these and the various sections of the state and the state capital. The state, therefore, should assume responsibility for these roads. They should be built and cared for through state taxation. Exception should be made of certain roads in the state whose function places them in a third class, that of national roads. Third: There is the national highway, the aggregate of which will constitute the system of national highways. These are roads which, while serving county needs, state needs and interstate needs, have for their primary function highway service to the country as a whole."

PACIFIC COAST IS BUILDING

Oregon Has Spent $57,000,000 in Five Years on Construction of Improved Roads.

In five years Oregon has spent $57,000,000 in road building. How's that for a population of only 800,000? No other state in the Union probably comes anywhere near such a per capita expenditure for good roads. Other Pacific states also are energetically constructing the very finest paved highways. Oregon's roads have cost $30,000 a mile, exclusive of bridges. The result is that you can now drive hundreds of miles north and south on roads the equal of any that New York, Chicago or any other large city can boast. Also, it will very shortly be possible to motor clear through the state of Oregon to the Idaho border line, a distance equal to the total length of England.

I noticed, too, a great many substantial roads in many parts of the western half of the country. Good roads always go hand-in-hand with a high state of civilization. If the Romans needed good roads in their day, how much does this far-flung continent need them today? Next to necessary expenditures for up-to-date sanitation no district can invest a generous amount of money more wisely than in constructing first-class roads, now so necessary for expeditious transportation of products and so conducive to the development of desirable social intercourse, without which we can never hope to have our agricultural resources adequately developed.

Yes, the West is on the right track.—B. C. Forbes in Forbes Magazine.

PROPER SERVICE FROM DRAG

Work Should Be Done After a Rain While Earth Is Still Soft but Not Sticky.

To secure results from the use of the road drag, it must be operated over the ordinary dirt highway at such a time as the earth is in proper condition to give best returns for the labor and effort expended. It is not unusual to see men dragging a road when the latter is so dry as to make the effort one of scraping rather than dragging. Highways should be dragged while the earth is still soft after a rain, yet not soft enough to stick to the drag. The surface which results upon drying is one which sheds water readily on the next rain if a proper slope to the road is left. An experienced worker will accomplish this by always pushing a little earth toward the center of the highway as he operates the drag.

Important Vehicular Traffic.

The big problem of highway transport is in letting the public know of the importance of vehicular traffic to the entire community just as the people now realize the value of schools to all persons in a town whether parents or not.

Freight by Motor Trucks.

More than 1,480,000,000 tons of freight, including 134,400,000 tons of farm produce, are now carried by motor trucks over the highways in this country every year.

You Pay Taxes on Swamp Land!

UNPRODUCTIVE land costs you money two ways—you pay taxes on acreage producing no revenue. Probably some of your neighbors are in the same boat.

But many farmers are finding out that land under water can be made to pay a profit by ditching the du Pont way—a quick, out-of-season job that is inexpensive and pays real dividends.

Du Pont low-freezing straight dynamite makes ditching cheaper, easier and quicker. Right now is the time to drain your land and put it to work. See us—we'll give you all necessary information and instructions about ditching and land-clearing—and quick delivery.

PROGRAM FOR "BEAU BRUMMEL"

To to Be Given by Senior Class at the High School Friday Night—Everything Ready for the Production—List of Characters and Helpers.

On Friday night the senior class of Kingston High School will present "Beau Brummel," a four act comedy by Clyde Fitch, at the high school. The story of the play is the rise to and fall from fame of the once poor boy, Brummel, who was poor as a boy, as a youth and as a man. Everyone knew he was poor, but he was never ridiculed for his lack of funds. People loaned him money without security and without even so much as vague hopes of its being some day returned. Tailors bid to clothe him. Kings sought his company at their courts. He was the model of the men, the idol of the ladies. He was the best dressed, best mannered man of all time. Everyone admired him. Then something happened. Beau Brummel suddenly disappeared, and one day he was found in the slums in a dingy attic, ragged, unkempt and worn, a beggar. This is the skeleton of the story. The rest is brought out in dramatic form by the pen of the author. Those who would like to see this story acted out are invited to have their wish fulfilled. The senior class invites them to their presentation of the play, to be given in the high school auditorium Friday night, starting at 8:15 o'clock. The program:

Act One.

Scene One—The morning toilet. Mr. Brummel despatches a proposal of marriage, assists his nephew and sends for a new tailor.

Scene Two—The Beau receives a number of friends and makes an unfortunate blunder.

Act Two.

Scene—A small and early party at Carlton House Mr. Brummel proposes to an heiress and reprimands a prince.

Act Three.

DAY-DREAMS NOT ENOUGH

Imagination Has Value, of Course, but It Must Be Backed Up by Deeds.

When things go wrong in business, when the future seems dreary to youth, there is no more subtle temptation than to sit day-dreaming—weaving dreams of the roseate career which shall banish all worries, bring to us the desire of our hearts, and enable us to have all the little luxuries of life which only money can buy.

Yet there is nothing more dangerous, remarks a writer for London Answers.

Adolescence is the golden age for day-dreaming—the time when the future is seen through the rosy mirror of inexperience, before the hammer of life cracks the glass, and we have to face life in its reality.

And when my young son reaches that stage, it will be time for me to give him a little carpet-lecture on some hard facts of applied psychology.

"Look here, old man," I shall say to him seriously. "I've noticed lately that you sit about a lot after school, thinking. You are going through a stage that we all go through about your age, and I want to warn you. Day dreaming is all very well in moderation, but you mustn't let it become a regular habit with you.

"It is the worst thing you can do. Do you know those day-dreams may slowly sap your energies, so that the phantasies you weave may not be translated into action. Some men I could point out to you have been left behind in life by too much day-dreaming."

Every man who has done anything big in the world has been a man with the "wider vision," but he has been a man of action, and has not allowed his hopes for the future to inhibit his present actions.

The man of action does not think: "In ten years I will be head of our office," and then sit down and wait for the ten years to roll by.

He starts immediately to gain the knowledge that will be of use to him, studies hard to become word perfect in the part he hopes to take in the world, and aims at rising step by step to the position of his dreams.

"Every emotion should have some outward expression in action," is a creed of the modern thinker. Many men who have not followed this rule have ended in a mental hospital, immersed in dreams and dead to the outside world.

Gets His Coal From River.

"Philadelphia has some advantages," said a New York business man. "One of my friends over there has a small factory on the banks of the Schuylkill. He says that he lets down a big wire net into the river and twice a day raises it and has several bushels of coal, enough to supply his needs. He says he has no doubt that if he would raise the net oftener he would get more coal, but twice a day gives him all he can use.

"The coal is fine, hardly more than dust, but after it is dried it makes acceptable fuel, and is obtained at no expense and with less trouble than having it delivered by a coal man. It is transported from the mines far up toward the source of the river without any charge for transportation. Another Philadelphia man said he could stick a big pump into silt at the bottom of the Schuylkill almost anywhere and pump up mud that burns well when dried and stoked with intelligence."—New York Sun.

What Happened.

"What's become of that there liver-colored hound of your'n. Gap; the one that had his right rear but off?" inquired an acquaintance who had paused in the big road.

"I took and gave him away," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, who was hooked over his front fence by his elbows.

"Great guns of iron! Gave him away—?"

"Well, just about the same as. Gabe Gosnell came along day before yesterday and wanted to swap for him. I sorter like Gabe, and after we'd jowered about all the forenoon I finally up and just nacherly gave him the hound for a cow, a fiddle and a pistol, such as it was. But if I didn't like Gabe so well, b'hung if I wouldn't be after him, right now, to trade back."—Kansas City Star.

Thought for the Day.

Some men spend more money trying to be a "good fellow" than they do trying to be a good husband or father.

World's Biggest Gem.

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately 21 cubic inches, weighs 2,572.332 carats, and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opal, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,658,027 carats, but has a number of flaws.

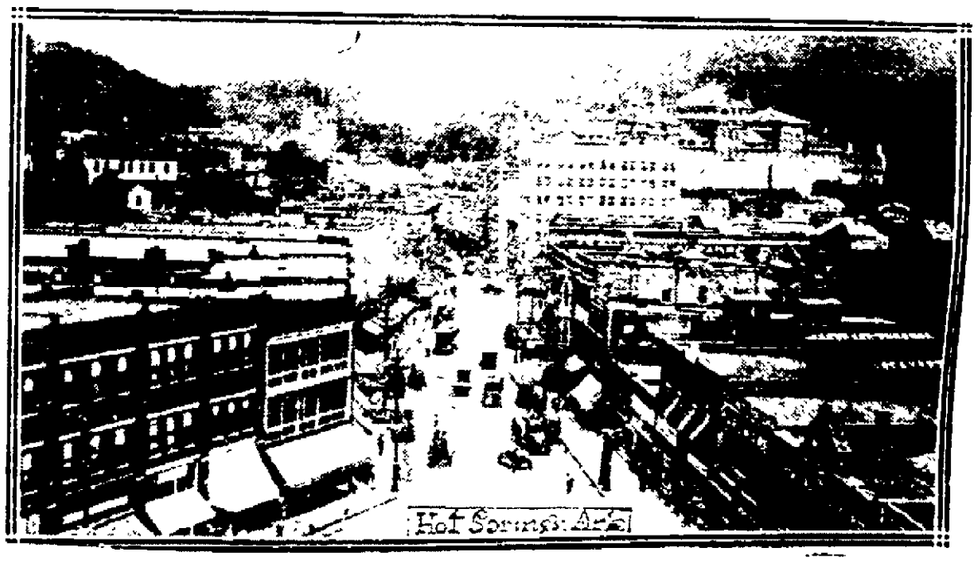
Greenebaum Bonds - 100% Safe Since 1855



Hot Springs, Arkansas, the noted health resort, is slowly recovering from the recent floods and fire which swept the city. Hot Springs, nestling down in the mountains, is so narrow in the valley it has but one main street, pictured here, down which the floods swept, followed by a fire that did hundreds of thousands of dollar's worth of damage. Early reports indicated a big loss of life, but it was later shown no one had perished.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ORANG-UTAN WINDY

Windy had a visitor. Now, Windy was an orang-utan and his home was in the zoo.

The keeper asked the lady who had come to call on Windy if she would like to watch Windy in the big room at the back of the monkey house and the lady said she would be delighted.

She was very fond of the orang utan pets at the zoo

"Well, Windy," said the keeper, "show the lady to the big room."

The keeper undid Windy's big cage and Windy hopped down and first of all shook hands with the lady.

Then he led her by the hand to the big room, finding it by himself. Windy went along on two feet and also helped himself by his other hand, which was not holding the lady's hand.

When the lady spoke to Windy he understood her. They got back to the big room and the lady said:

"Come, Windy, and sit by me."

She didn't say the words as though giving a command. She didn't point to a place for him to come. She said it in a very ordinary tone of voice and yet Windy understood perfectly.

He came over and sat by her and when she asked him to shake hands with her he did so. Then she patted him and said:

"Nice Windy. Windy, would you like a banana?"

"Well, Windy understood at once. He began sniffing about her as though to say:

"Where is that banana which you're asking me if I would like?"

And the lady said:

"If you look in my big black bag over on yonder table you will find a banana in it."

Windy hopped down and went over to the table. He jumped up on the table, after having pulled a chair near to it so as to help himself up and then he got hold of the black bag. Now, the black bag had quite difficult catch which had to be snapped one way and then up another before it would open.

At first Windy puzzled over it, but soon he found the way it would open and then he looked inside.

There were two packages there. One had sandwiches in it which the lady was going to have later on, and in the other were two bananas.

Windy first took hold of the package with the sandwiches.

"No, not that one, said the lady. "The other package."

And Windy then took hold of the other package and began to untie the string.

"Let's each eat a banana," said the lady. And Windy came over to her and handed her a banana, and then he sat beside her and, taking over the skin of his banana, as he ate it, they each had a little treat—the lady and the orang-utan!

He wasn't greedy in the way he ate. He just had a thoroughly good time.

And then Windy wandered about the room entertaining the lady.

He hadn't been taught any tricks except those he had taught himself.

And he understood all sorts of things the lady said to him—not just such words as he might have learned anyway.

He understood her tones of voice and what she meant.

And as they sat there in the room the children stood outside the window and watched them.

They shrieked with delight to see the things Windy was doing. He went over to a water faucet and turned it on and took a wash-rag and cleaned his face. Then he dried it with a towel which was hanging nearby.

Next he took a toothbrush, which was kept there for him in a cup, and he brushed his teeth, and then he looked at himself in the mirror hanging above.

He brushed himself and came again and sat by the lady. Then he would stop for a moment or so and the lady could see he was thinking what to do next, just as anyone will stop and think and then begin to do something else.

He pulled the window blinds up and down and he arranged the chairs in the room, he turned a somersault and he did some fine climbing, and when it was time for the lady to leave he took her back, opening the door for her.

And when she left he politely shook hands with her. Oh, Windy was so polite and such a lovable, interesting animal. Yes, he was all of that and even more. The lady loved him better than any other animal in the zoo and she knew them all pretty well.

GOOD HEALTH FOODS

Use the whole wheat fresh from the granary when obtainable, soak over night and simmer until each kernel is cracked and surrounded with cooked starch. Serve with top milk or cream without sugar. A dish of this may be cooked, kept in a cool place and served two or three times a week.

Bran Muffins.—The alimentary tract needs a good brushing occasionally to cleanse it and to stimulate the action of the digestive juices. Bran taken in spoonfuls in a glass of cold water, or stirred into any breakfast food is good, but in the form of hot muffins it is especially agreeable. Mix together one and one-half cupfuls of flour and the same of wheat bran, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt. Beat one egg, add one-half tablespoonful of minced parsley, one cupful of molasses and one and one-half cupfuls of milk. Pour the liquid into the dry mixture and stir until smooth. The batter should be quite thin. Add two tablespoonfuls of melted shortening and pour into well-greased muffin pans and bake until firm and brown. Raisins may be added if desired.

Onion Chowder.—Peel six or eight large onions, slice very thin and cook in four tablespoonfuls of melted butter or pork fat until a light yellow. Add three cupfuls of diced potatoes, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one quart of boiling water. Season with two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of sage or marjoram and cook slowly until the potatoes are tender. Add three cupfuls of hot milk and serve with crackers.

Cabbage Salad.—Shred cabbage to make one and one-half cupfuls. Soak in cold water for half and hour, drain and salt well. Mix one and one-half cupfuls of diced celery with one cupful of pecan nuts, one-half cupful of diced pineapple and French dressing to season. Let stand to marinate and serve on lettuce or cabbage leaves; garnish with bits of red pepper.

PELLETS OF TRUTH

No matter what's the matter, some people think that it doesn't matter.

A beautiful untruth generally exposes itself by being too beautiful.

You can't tell what a woman thinks of a man by what she says about him.

Every time a man has his fortune told he gets rid of a small portion of it.

When housecleaning begins, a towel bound about her head is a woman's helmet of war.

Labor produces wealth, but if the wealth is coconuts, it is only climbing a tree.

It's wonderful what good memories people develop after they have done you a favor.

The market price of airships would indicate that only the rich can pose as high flyers.

Some men can't understand why the truth will nearly always serve better than a lie.

When a town woman spends a few days in the country she refers to it ever after as a house party.

It's an easy thing to convince men that honesty is the best policy when it pays better than the other kind.

Rather Embarrassing, However, the Frankness With Which Ruth Discussed the Idea.

We had a wealthy bachelor, terribly stingy, living across the hall in our apartment. He came to our apartment frequently to play cards.

He and our little four-year-old daughter, Ruth, became friends. He always tried to get her to call him "Uncle Frank."

I remarked to my husband I would teach her to call him uncle if I thought he would leave her something in his will.

One evening in the midst of our card game, Ruth touched him on an elbow and said, "Mother says she will teach me to call you uncle if you leave me some of your will."—Chicago Tribune.

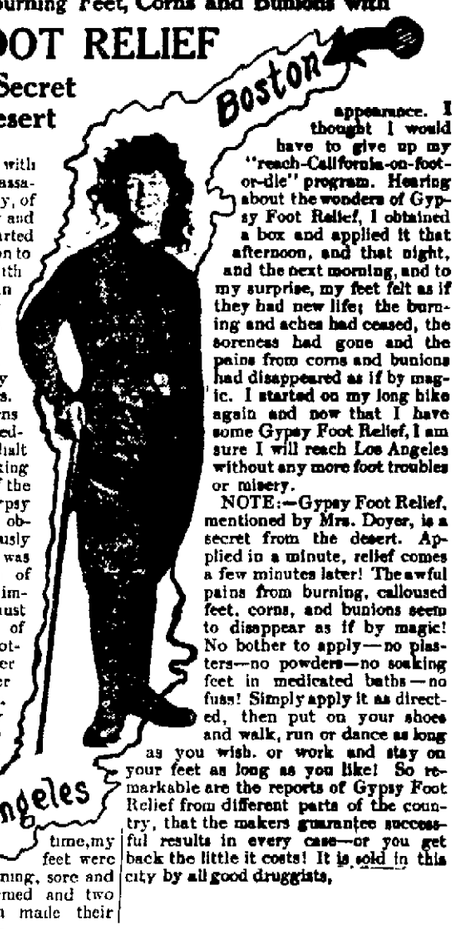
Burning Feet, Corns and Callouses Halt Mrs. Doyer

On long hike from Boston to Los Angeles

Reaches New York Where Foot Troubles Threaten To End Strenuous Journey. Tells How She Outwitted Pains From Sore, Burning Feet, Corns and Bunions with

GYPSY FOOT RELIEF

A Wonderful Secret From the Desert



AFTER shaking hands with Governor Cox, of Massachusetts and Mayor Curley, of Boston, Mrs. Bella Doyer and her fifteen-year old son started their long hike from Boston to Los Angeles, California, with nothing but jack-knives in their pockets and walking sticks for protection on their strenuous journey. Dressed in khaki uniforms, they reached New York City in good time, where Mrs. Doyer's burning feet, corns and the appearance of a red-sore bunion threatened to halt her intended record-making expedition. But hearing of the wonders performed by Gypsy Foot Relief, Mrs. Doyer obtained a box and anxiously put it to the test, for here was an aggravated condition of foot troubles calling for immediate relief, and she must make good her slogan of "reach-Los Angeles-by-foot-or-die!" How Mrs. Doyer succeeded is best told in her own words in an interview, just before leaving New York to continue her 3,300 mile foot-trip. She said:—

"When we reached New York City, in good time, my feet were burning, sore and aching, callouses had formed and two corns and a sore bunion made their appearance. I thought I would have to give up my "reach-California-on-foot-or-die" program. Hearing about the wonders of Gypsy Foot Relief, I obtained a box and applied it that afternoon, and that night, and the next morning, and to my surprise, my feet felt as if they had new life; the burning and aches had ceased, the soreness had gone and the pains from corns and bunions had disappeared as if by magic. I started on my long hike again and now that I have some Gypsy Foot Relief, I am sure I will reach Los Angeles without any more foot troubles or misery.

NOTE:—Gypsy Foot Relief, mentioned by Mrs. Doyer, is a secret from the desert. Applied in a minute, relief comes a few minutes later! The awful pains from burning, callousted feet, corns, and bunions seem to disappear as if by magic! No bother to apply—no plasters—no powders—no soaking feet in medicated baths—no fuss! Simply apply it as directed, then put on your shoes and walk, run or dance as long as you wish, or work and stay on your feet as long as you like! So remarkable are the reports of Gypsy Foot Relief from different parts of the country, that the makers guarantee successful results in every case—or you get back the little it costs! It is sold in this city by all good druggists.

READY TO FLY AROUND WORLD

Army Air Service Has Tentative Route Already Planned.

MONEY ALL THAT'S NEEDED

The army air service is ready to start an airplane on a flight around the world as soon as it can secure enough money from congress to make such a trip possible. Tentative plans have already been figured out by government authorities.

The first stop of the airplane when it leaves Bolling field, near the national capital, will be at Detroit, according to the present scheme.

From Detroit the flight will be resumed across the lower portion of Canada to Alaska and the Aleutian islands. The exact landing places in these regions have not been determined, but the shortest route will be selected across the Bering sea, which would bring the plane to Kamchatka, and in a favorable position to fly over the Sea of Oshotak and into Vladivostok. Of course the attitude of the Bolsheviki would have to be considered and perhaps a change made in the plans of crossing Siberia.

From either Vladivostok or Japan the flight would be along the coast of China to Singapore, thence across the Bay of Bengal and the Dekhan of India to Bombay. From this city the route already laid out by British military airmen would be followed. This route would take the Americans across Mesopotamia, up the Mediterranean to Marseilles and then to Paris and London. From England to the United States either the Azores course would be selected or the Greenland-Canada route.

British airmen have already made flights across Mesopotamia and to India and Australia, and the trip across the Atlantic has also been made by several flyers so that the only portion of the world route which has not yet been tested is that across the Bering sea and the coast of China.

Trip to Cover 30,000 Miles.

Experts estimate that the proposed trip will cover about 30,000 miles, and that it will require four months' travel at the minimum. This latter estimate is based on the recent flight from San Antonio to Porto Rico and return, a trip which covered 6,000 miles and required a month, although the actual flying time was only 61 hours.

The opinion prevails that a speed of 100 miles per hour can be maintained by the flyers and that they will average only about five hours actual flying per day. On that basis it will require 60 days to make the trip without making any stops. As a matter of fact it is estimated that at least 50 or 60 stops will be made, which will average one day each.

It has developed that while the flight to Porto Rico was helpful in giving a line on the equipment necessary for a long journey by air and was excellent training and experience for the personnel, it was in no sense preliminary to the round-the-world journey. In making the flight to Porto Rico time was not an element and the flyers were permitted to rest and relax in Porto Rico.

On the other hand those who are discussing the proposed round-the-world trip realize that many unavoidable delays may occur during the journey which will consume considerable time.

Army flyers believe that the T-2, the remodeled thick-wing monoplane in which Lieutenants Kelly and McCready of the air service set new world records for distance, is suitable for a flight around the world. Certain additional modifications may be necessary to accomplish such a long flight or it may be decided to construct a larger plane along the lines of the T-2.

Ask Congress for Money.

However, before the experiment can be carried out it will be necessary for congress to make a substantial appropriation for that purpose. It is estimated that it will cost from $200,000 to $300,000 to properly equip an airplane to make the long journey and to establish the necessary oil, gas and repair stations along the route.

There are no funds now available for that purpose. Practically all of the money appropriated for the next fiscal year will be needed to replace lost, obsolete and disabled planes, so that it will be necessary for congress to be more generous in its appropriation for the army air service next year than during the last session.

In view of the renewed discussion of the probable importance the airplane will play in the next war, and the recognition of that possibility by other nations in the way of increased appropriations for the air service, army officials in charge of the air service believe sufficient funds will be provided to carry out the proposed experiment and to make others of equal importance.

Army officials say that it is very necessary to work out plans which will insure the safe journey of airplanes on long and sustained trips. Other nations, they claim, are making great headway in that direction, so that in the event of war an air base of great potentiality could be established far from the scene of hostilities. The nation which develops machines and pilots capable of making long flights successfully will have a decided advantage over the less progressive nation, army officials argue.

Experiments are now being made at McCook field, Dayton, O., by the army air service with a view of making the cruising radius of airplanes much longer, since it is generally believed in army air service circles that that factor is a vital one and it should be developed to the utmost limit.

Aid to Commercial Air Service.

The trip around the world, they say, would emphasize the problems to be solved and the difficulties in the way when it is impossible to establish an air base near the enemy's line. Furthermore, an additional advantage in making the flight would be to show the great possibilities of further development of the commercial airplane.

Despite the handicaps due to the lack of funds, the army air service is much gratified at the results accomplished thus far, and the officials are looking to the future with assurance and increasing confidence. They are proud of the fact that only recently the army air service broke all airplane speed records when the high mark of 250 miles an hour was reached.

This flight, according to the official report just received by Major General Patrick, was made during the flight from Nogales, Ariz., to Fort Bliss, Tex. Maj. Lee G. Hefferman, piloting a DH-4-B airplane, with Sergeant Jensen as observer, negotiated the distance of 75 miles from Columbus, N. M., to Fort Bliss in 18 minutes, an average speed of 250 miles an hour.

The flight from Columbus to Fort Bliss was made in a blinding sandstorm—the air being saturated with sand to the height of 6,000 feet. Major Hefferman, according to his report to General Patrick, tried to climb above the sand after leaving Columbus, but was unable on account of the velocity of the wind and the shortness of the flight.

SEEK HAVEN IN HONOLULU

Hawaiian Metropolis Now "Port of Missing Men."

Honolulu, Hawaii.—Honolulu is a world wide "Port of Missing Men."

From Chicago, New York, Baltimore, London, Singapore, Shanghai and from Paris, Alexandria and even Kalamazoo, come letters to Mayor John H Wilson inquiring whether the Widow Murphy's son has located here or whether John Smith, Jr., has stopped off at this port. All inform the mayor that fond parents or relatives are seeking them and that all will be forgiven if they return home.

The Honolulu chief executive gets about two letters a week, on an average, all seeking information regarding missing persons who, they think, "may be in Honolulu." The mayor usually turns the letters over to local newspapers for publication.

Only the other day a newspaper here printed such a story and the next day the person sought turned up at the city hall to make inquiries.

"It's astonishing," says the mayor, "how many of those for whom inquiries are made, turn up here."

EIFFEL TOWER FOR LONDON

It Will Be 600 Feet High, With Searchlight on Top.

London is soon to have an "Eiffel" tower, built of concrete, 600 feet high. It will be erected at Wembley, the seat of the British empire exhibition. Although falling short of the height of the Woolworth building in New York and the Eiffel tower in Paris, the proposed structure will give visitors to the exhibition a panoramic view of the country for hundreds of miles.

The tower will be surmounted by a searchlight so powerful that it can be seen from the coast of France. Visitors will be taken up the tower in a giant cage, which will rotate around the exterior at the rate of fourteen miles an hour.

Treasury Will Discontinue $2 Bill.

The two-dollar bill, which has caused many a worry when it has been mistaken for a one, will be the first to go under plans of the Treasury department for a complete revision of currency designs. Treasury officials have completed the reorganization plan, and approval is expected soon.

The Black Letter Type.

The black letter was first employed in printed books in the middle of the Fifteenth century. The first types were Gothic. Pliny's "Natural History," printed in 1469, was printed in Roman type.

SPRING WEATHER'S EFFECT ON FRUIT

How Wind, Rain, and Cold May Interfere With Proper Pollination And Result Disastrously To Fruit Crop.

This is the season of the year to speculate on the coming fruit crop. Many growers know to their sorrow that a heavy bloom does not necessarily mean a full crop of fruit. Some of the reasons why blossoms fail to set fruit are given in a recent statement by the horticulturist of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva. The chief cause of the failure, according to this authority, is unfavorable weather conditions during blooming time, and of these rain accompanied with a cold wind causes the loss of more fruit than any other adverse condition. Warm, sunny days followed by still, clear, cold nights are also dangerous to the fruit crop because the blossoms are forced prematurely during the day only to be injured by the low temperatures at night.

How Damage Is Done

Several things may happen to interfere with the proper setting of the fruit due to adverse weather conditions, says the Station fruit specialist, the most obvious being the washing of the pollen from the anthers, injury of the pollen grains by chilling and by excess moisture, prevention of bees and other insects from working in the blossoms, whipping the blossoms from the trees by strong winds, and many other harmful effects.

"There is nothing that can be done to control these weather conditions," says the Station horticulturist. "Something can be accomplished, however, by selecting fruit varieties with regard to their ability to withstand adverse weather conditions, by resorting to suitable cultural practices to stimulate resistance to cold, and by exercising care in the choice of the orchard site."

ROTARY INVITED TO OPERA HOUSE

Many Interesting Matters Discussed and Good Talk Given at Club's Weekly Luncheon.

The Rev. Dr. J. J. Henry, former president of the Poughkeepsie Kiwanis Club, was the speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon on Wednesday. Dr. Henry's topic was the Kiwanis motto, "We build," and in developing it he set forth the value and necessity of building in every way—character, communities, individuals. There is something more than athletic exercises with a knife and fork behind clubs like Rotary and Kiwanis, Dr. Henry said, for they promote the get together spirit and bring men into such contact that they are enabled to cooperate in building.

An invitation for Rotarians to attend Kingston Opera House next Monday evening was accepted. Tickets for the "ladies' night" at the high school next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock were distributed. There were brief reports by President Johnson and Secretary Harder on the conference of presidents and secretaries which they attended last Saturday at the Hotel McAlpin in New York city. Chairman Scudder of the Boys' Work Committee, reported that 35 boys had been taken to the Boy Scouts' outing at Phoenicia last week. A brief report of the trip to Catskill Tuesday evening by 21 of the club members was given.

HOME BUREAU DIST. MEETINGS

Home Bureau Conducts Training Schools for Efficient Leadership in Different Communities Throughout Ulster County.

District training meetings for more efficient leadership were held last week in Kerhonkson, Modena and Kingston, for the executive committees and project leaders of the surrounding Home Bureau communities.

Miss Claribel Nye from Cornell University conducted the schools. The following subjects were taken up:

Qualities of a good leader, and qualities of a poor leader.

The selection and organization of a community committee, and what to take into consideration in electing the various officers.

The responsibility of this community committee.

The duties of the community committee.

Organization and program planning and direction.

Publicity and membership.

Reports, records and finances.

The responsibilities of committee members, such as chairman, vice-chairman, secretary-treasurer, project leaders and assistants.

The responsibilities of members.

Miss Nye also gave what might be called a score card by which each committee might measure their community organization as to its efficiency.

The community data sheet taken up in the afternoon was very helpful in bringing out clearly that each community has problems which might be solved through a clear understanding of them and through cooperation with other organizations. The problem of how to spread Home Bureau service to those who canot come out to meetings was discussed next, and various ways suggested for solving these:

First, through the county office by newspaper publicity.

Second, by sending the Farm and Home Bureau News once or twice a year to people suggested by the community committee.

Third, a letter annually containing specific help to the same people.

For the community, three or four times a year, open meetings, at which time the community committee and members will make a special effort to bring these people in.

By an evening entertainment.

A Home Bureau play, or a community sing.

A very splendid spirit prevailed through these organization training schools. Time and time again it was brought out that the thing uppermost in the minds of these women was service to their community. They came to these meetings to find and to learn ways in which they could be of more service to their community.

Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Campanile, or Bell tower, better known as the leaning tower of Pisa, was completed in 1350 by Tommaso Pisano. It has six galleries of pillars and is 179 feet high, with a deviation from the perpendicular of fourteen feet, which, according to all reports, resulted from an earthquake which occurred while the tower was being built.

AFRICAN JUNGLE SCENES SCREENED

"Hunting Big Game in Africa With Gun and Camera" Furnishes Enough Thrills to Satisfy Everybody.

For one week beginning May 21, Manager Gildersleeve will show at the Kingston Opera House what is said to be one of the most sensational films ever recorded. It is "Hunting Big Game in Africa With Gun and Camera," a Universal film which records the 60,000 mile trip of an expedition headed by H. A. Snow who with his son, Sidney Snow, as cameraman, visited Africa under the auspices of the Oakland, California, Museum of Natural History and which consumed nearly three years. The picture is considered one of greatest records of wild life in the "dark continent."

The expedition set out in 1919 for Cape Town and it was 1922 before California again came into the vision of the members of the expedition. Some 80,000 miles were travelled, about 60,000 miles of which were measured out in Africa where Mr. Snow, Sr., lost ninety-eight pounds of weight and both he and his son as well as other members of the party were laid up for weeks with fever. A total of 125,000 feet of film were exposed and from this 8,000 feet has been selected and is now being shown on the screen as "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera."

The picture shows real animal life in the African jungles. None of the animals are tamed in a zoo, they are animals in the wild state and many of the scenes shown were recorded at the risk of life and limb. Sidney Snow, son of the explorer, who operated the camera was numerous times within the grasp of death as an animal charged the camera but trusting to his father's sure aim escaped with some of the most remarkable pictures ever taken.

Everyone who has read "Big Game Hunting in Africa," from the pen of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, will have a slight imagination of what the picture is.

One of the thrills of the picture is a daring elephant hunt where the entire party and camera were charged by an infuriated herd of elephants. Practically every animal which inhabits the African jungle is shown either in a close-up or in a clear distant picture. At one time the cameraman was charged and in order to save his life the camera was abandoned and demolished by a furious beast.

At the Touch of a Button

Electrical equipment in the household leads to contentment and repose. For electricity, through its manifold applications, has emancipated the housewife from the drudgery of hard physical work. It has created new hours for leisure and for recreation.

At the touch of a button, the electric helps are instantly ready to do your bidding. The washing machine will handle the week's washing, doing it better, quicker and cheaper; the vacuum cleaner will clean your floors and furnishings, cleaner than they have ever been cleaned before; the electric iron will save countless steps and distressing heat in the kitchen.

Equip your home for electric light and appliances. Go to your electrical contractor or to the lighting company.

COMMON SENSE TALK ON BUSINESS

High School Students Reminded That First Command Is, "Be On Time" —Accountancy Recommended as Career.

"Opportunities in Business for High School Students after Graduation" was the topic of a talk given to the high school students on Thursday morning by E. M. Massee, of the Pace Institute of New York city. Mr. Massee is a graduate of Hamilton, class of 1907, with an A.B., and is a fraternity brother of Mr. Perry, both belonging to the D. U. frat.

In beginning his talk Mr. Massee made a few remarks about meeting so many graduates of Hamilton at K. H. S. and also handing a few friendly jabs to Mr. Lewis, relative to the Theta Delt. fraternity. The associations one makes in college, said the speaker, are very valuable to a man after he gets into business. It is the same with high school and other schools. The time is drawing near when some of the high school students will leave for other parts. Never again will they all be together in a single body, but still each one will carry with him into life the joy of friendly times at school. He will always look back with pleasure upon his school days, and the pleasure thus afforded will be worth to him more than so many dollars.

One of the things learned at school is to be on time, which is also the first commandment in business. In college, one gets more than a knowledge of Greek, Latin, mathematics, or any other one subject. The main thing afforded by a college education is a general knowledge of the principles upon which business is based. He gets, therefore, a general knowledge which is a basis upon which to build his future. A person who does not graduate from high school, where the elementary business requirements are learned, is seriously handicapped in business. He is veritably "open to suspicion." It is really only the graduates who are given the opportunity to grow in their line, for the others are not looked upon as being qualified. At least a high school training is absolutely necessary for greater development. If a person who gets out of high school cannot get to college, he should study business while he is working, for study is necessary for the person who wants to become proficient in his work.

In business there are but two alternatives. One must go forward or go backward. The question is which course to take, and the person must decide for himself which alternative he will choose. Going forward means good compensation, but it also means more work, more study, longer hours. Once started he must keep on. In business there always someone to take his place. A person may slip once or twice and be helped back on his feet again, but a time will come, if this slipping be continued, when the slipping person will slide off and someone else will step in and take the job. There is always someone following directly behind.

The students should give this careful consideration. The freshmen have just started their schooling, and think of the three more years as long, but they are indeed short, and the freshmen of today will soon wake up to find themselves in the midst of the business world, facing the question of "forward or backward." Now is the time for all to face the problem squarely and make one decision or the other. Many in business today are failures with no chance to remedy the situation. The students in school have time to prepare for their career and should make the most of this opportunity.

When talking about business, one must bring strongly into view professional accountancy. This is the guiding line of business, and the fundamental of fundamentals in business training. The number of professional accountants in this country is very small. Most of the men who have studied accountancy and become proficient are now in business. Large firms are always on the lookout for good accountants, and they take most of the best ones as soon as they have proved their worth. The reason for the accountants making out so well in business is that a knowledge of accountancy is the absolute necessity for good business.

Business is interesting, but one could not get very far in it at that if he did not have the basic principles. At a meeting of the prominent men in business today an effort was made to create somehow an interest in accountancy on the part of their employes. The point upon which these men laid greatest stress was that all who are going into business or who are just started in business should get some knowledge of accountancy. Mr. Massee then read the names of the men who were at the meeting where this was recommended, and there was but one, President Young, of the General Electric Company, who was himself an accountant. This fact shows what an important part of business that subject is. Those who are not going to college should get interested in the subject and study it.

It is by no means necessary that a person spend all his college course on accountancy to make good. The thing to do is to get all the general knowledge of business principles for future development. An accountant's main studies are commercial law, economics, bookkeeping and other such subjects.

Accountancy is not for men alone, as is generally believed. Many business men are asking continually for stenographers who understand the basic principles of business. These are the people who are making a success of their lives in business.

Those who are interested should begin in their training, and later in their business career, with the goal of success in their minds, determined to keep on the road that leads forward, jealous of their place, determined not to slip back and eager to study and learn. Then they should use their knowledge for the working out of the many new ideas that will come into their heads from time to time and which will bring them to fame and prominence in their work.

Helen Gladdings and Roy Cummings

At Derby, Connecticut, two pretty women are trying to make one man happy. That man has been husband to one of the women and now is husband to the other. Roy Cummings, vaudeville headliner, married Helen Gladdings, his vaudeville partner, in Bridgeton, New Jersey, nine years ago. They separated, and, in 1919 Cummings permitted her to divorce him. "I gave her $1,026,600," he said. "Count it up—a $17,500 home in Freeport, Long Island, a $3,500 car, a $1,000,000 baby and a $100 dog." Also, the Court gave her alimony of $150 a week. Later, Cummings married Wife No. 2, Irene Shaw, who was playing with Fred Stone. They were married in Orange, New Jersey. All three met in swimming at Long Beach, New York. The two wives became very fond of each other, and now all three live together, obeying, they say, the laws of God and man—and Cummings is saving $150 a week alimony, so Wife No. 2 can have a new sealskin coat this fall.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Beside, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure and ask for "Mulsified" cocoanut oil shampoo.

IGHT GRADE CHOOL BUILDINGS

ic menace inherent in these old ildings. Many of them are fire ps and menace the life of those who must use them. Every city has w or more of these old school ildings. But the progressive ties are replacing them with ildings of modern construction d plan and wherever possible, th the larger consolidated build- as complete in equipment and ion as the modern high school.

Below is given a list of the school ildings of Kingston, the date ected and the number of rooms.

School	Date erected	No. rooms
No. 1	1910	4
No. 2	about 1855	14 in use
No. 3	about 1890	10
No. 4	1861	11
No. 5	1910	16
No. 6	1898	12
No. 7	1899	12
No. 8	1880	12
High School	1914	49

Of these nine buildings three are ancient; three were built previous to 1900, and two buildings for the elementary and the high school are modern.

In the study recently made of the onstruction of school buildings in the United States less than 5% of the 7,150 reported were of standard fire proof construction. The buildings were rated according to the following classification:

Type "A"—A completely fireproof structure.

Type "B"—Not fireproof, but fire resistive to a degree.

Type "C"—Best described as of slow-burning construction.

Type "D" and "E"—Fire traps; the only difference between "D" and "E" is the masonry walls of brick veneer of type "D", which may afford protection to adjoining buildings, or lessen the menace of fire from the outside.

By this classification Kingston has one building of type "B" and eight of type "D". Only one building is equipped with iron fire escapes.

Kingston has a modern high school but there is evident need of a building program for the elementary schools. Schools No. 2, 4 and 7 are unfit for use because of the ventilation, light and construction. Their present use as school buildings reflects no credit upon Kingston.

After careful study it might be demonstrated that one or two consolidated elementary school buildings would be practicable. This would be an economy both in construction and operation and the larger building could provide auditorium, gymnasium and shops.

It is evident from the size of classes that more rooms must be found in order to take care of the normal increase in population. The present school buildings are being used to capacity, and three of them should be abandoned.

Now is the time for the citizens of Kingston to purchase sites for school buildings and playgrounds and provide for present and future needs. In this program include a junior high school.

Before making a school building program the city could well afford to send the superintendent and members of the board of education to inspect school buildings in cities where modern methods of construction and equipment have been most successfully worked out. With this first hand knowledge, the board could act with facility upon the recommendations invited from experts in this special field.

Health.

The expenditure for health service in the schools of the United States is 35c per pupil per year. The total expended in the schools of over 400 cities in the United States for the health service including medical inspection, dental and nurse service is $1,341,000 out of a total of current expenses of $2,509,434,486, or only 46c for each $100 of current expense—less than one-half of one per cent. This seeming lack of support to such a necessary service is largely explained by the fact that health service has only recently been introduced into the public school system.

The need for this service is generally admitted and it is being extended in all of the progressive schools of the country. The child population of the community congregates in the schools and there is no better place to keep a check on the health of all the children of school age. It has been learned from sad experience that a child with a communicable disease can infect many other children and force the closing of the school. The community spends more money upon the child that is backward because of some physical defect than upon the one who is in normal health. Malnutrition, defective teeth, eye strain, adenoids cause many a pupil to drag in his work and a few backward pupils will seriously check the progress of the entire class. Adequate medical inspection, dental and nurse service are necessary in every school system.

Kingston employs one school nurse and provides medical inspection. This health service applies only to the public schools. There are four parochial and one Lutheran school without nurse service or medical inspection.

Dental service should be added to the schools' health program and some means provided to extend health service to the parochial schools.

Board of Education.

One of the outstanding problems in American education is the relation of the Board of Education and the public schools to the municipality of which they are a part. There are many who hold the theory that public education is properly one department in municipal organization on an equality so far as city government is concerned, with the Police and Fire Departments. The opposite theory is steadily upheld by the court is that public education is distinctly a state function, that the state should delegate to the Board of Education the power to determine its own budget and to levy a sufficient tax having regard only for state limitations as to the amount of the tax rate. Forty-seven per cent of the Boards of Education in this country are independent.

There are nine members on the Board of Education of Kingston and they are elected for a term of five years from the city at large. All vacancies are filled by the mayor. Final authority in determining the amount of the school budget rests virtually with the board. The school budget is submitted to the Common Council and the council may make recommendations to reduce or increase the different schedules. But these suggestions may be overruled by a two-thirds vote of the board, and then the budget would stand as originally submitted.

Members of the Board of Education of Kingston are not paid. In only 14 per cent of the cities of the country are board members paid a salary for their services. A notable example of a paid Board of Education is in San Francisco, California, where there is a board of four members appointed by the mayor for a term of four years at an annual salary of $3,000 each. On the whole, the practice is not to be commended. Even a small salary attracts to the office inferior members rather than men and women whose active interest is for progress and efficiency in the schools.

Revenue and Expenditures.

The revenue of the public schools of Kingston for the last fiscal year beginning August 1st, 1921 and ending July 31st, 1922, were as follows: The state, $71,587.17; federal government, $241.25; local taxes, $202,549.54; all other sources, $20,837.58, making a total of $295,215.50.

The total expenditures for this last fiscal year were $263,922.67. Of this amount there was spent for teachers' salaries, including superintendents, $167,881.13; operation of school plant, $32,202.00; maintenance of plant, $8,417.51; capital outlay, $2,105.04; bonds and interest short term loans, $42,402.78; other items, $28,792.93.

The expenditure for a pupil in American schools ranges from about $16.50 in two southern cities to more than $130.00 in one of the small eastern cities. The median amount for cities of the United States is $56.89. The total expenditures of the schools of Kingston amount to $283,922.67. Dividing this total expenditure by the number of pupils, the annual cost per pupil in the schools of Kingston is $87.00.

This comparative review of the public schools in this and other cities of the country shows Kingston exactly where she stands. A larger expenditure for public education in the city is inevitable if a building program is undertaken. As soon as Kingston is possessed of a well designed school plant and equipment, the cost of maintenance, operation and supervision will be considerably less and more pupils can be accommodated.

It has not been the purpose of this survey to enter into any discussion of the program of instruction, but two subjects should be mentioned; the one, kindergartens and the other, vocational training. There is no kindergarten in the Kingston school system. The kindergarten movement during the last seven years has grown rapidly. This department in American public schools is far behind in its development. Not more than one child in eight, between five and six years of age, now enjoys this type of school. For all American cities, the percentage of increase during the last seven years for kindergarten was 30 per cent and for eastern cities only, 11 per cent. It is to be regretted that there are no kindergarten classes in Kingston.

Dr. Strayer, of the Teachers' College, New York city, makes the statement that for every 100 boys and girls enrolled in the school, at 9 years of age, only 36 of them will be present in school at 16 years of age. He continues: "It is gratifying to know of the increase in attendance both in junior and senior high schools, but it is clear that we still have the problem of providing education for a large percentage of boys and girls beyond 14 years of age."

A vocational educational survey of the city of Kingston in the report presented by the state department of education, division of the vocational extension education, in February, 1922, shows in the following summary of facts the small percentage of Kingston boys 16, 17 and 18 years of age not in schol.

1—Total number of 16, 17 and 18 year old boys in Kingston	700
2—Number of 16, 17 and 18 year old boys not in regular full time school	561
3—Number of 16, 17 and 18 year old boys in regular full time school	139
4—Per cent of 16, 17 and 18 year old boys in and out of school:
Out of school:	P. C.
16 years old	70.4
17 years old	78.5
18 years old	91.4
In school:	P. C.
16 years old	29.6
17 years old	21.5
18 years old	8.6

It has also been learned through this inquiry that 79 per cent of these boys left school because they wanted to work; 34 per cent began at a weekly wage of $6; 22.7 per cent at $3 and 16 per cent at $9. In answer to a question why they liked their jobs, 35.5 per cent answered, "work interesting" and 17 per cent answered "good wages."

These few outstanding facts show the need and the opportunity in Kingston for classes in vocational education. With such training, a boy can make a start intelligently and not depend upon the job a friend recommends. He would be saved at least two years spent in shifting from job to job until the right one was found. The following is a summary of the recommendations as to courses to be introduced in public schools of the city of Kingston:

Day High School Course.

A cooperative course in retail training in the high school.

Evening Vocational Classes.

1—A course or courses for machinists.

2—A course or courses for sheet metal workers.

3—A course or courses for carpenters and mill workers.

4—A course or courses for electrical workers.

5—A course or courses in steam engineering.

6—A course or courses in retail training.

7—A course or courses in general commercial work.

8—A course or courses in homemaking (dressmaking, millinery or cooking).

Part-time or Continuation Schools.

1—A course or courses in machine shop practice.

2—A course or courses in sheet metal work.

3—A course or courses in carpentry and building.

4—A course or courses in electrical work.

5—A course or courses in mill work.

6—A course or courses in power machine operating.

7—A course or courses in retail training.

8—A course or courses in general commercial work.

Industrial and Household Arts.

The several committees appointed to make a study of the importance, extent and requirements of the dominant occupations of Kingston, recommend that suitable industrial arts be offered to all boys of the seventh, eighth and high schol grades.

This report of the general survey committee on vocational education gives a careful analysis of the principal occupations of Kingston, and the reasons set forth in detail for its several recommendations deserves the careful reading of the citizens of Kingston. Means should be found for its publication in a form which would permit of a wide circulation.

There is need of concerted action among the business men of Kingston in studying the problems which confront their public schools. It is essential that the schools should have their intelligent cooperation, because a school building program will necessitate more funds which can be raised only by increasing the rate of taxation, the valuation of property upon which taxes are levied or by discovering new sources of revenue. When the citizens come to a full understanding of existing problems, they can be depended upon to provide the support necessary for the maintenance and development of their public school system.

GUESTS READY, BRIDE SAYS "NO"

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 17.—Capital society was provided with a nine day sensation here today in the abrupt cancellation of the marriage plans of Miss Nancy Hoyt, wealthy Washington debutante, and Lieut. F. Wiseman-Clarke of the British navy.

The wedding was to have been "the" society event of the spring season, and its conclusion came in startling fashion. The guests were assembled, some from thousands of miles away, the minister was waiting —when suddenly the mother of the bride burst into the room with the announcement that the marriage had been indefinitely postponed because of her daughter's illness.

That was late Wednesday. Early today the parents of the British naval officer ,who had come from England for the ceremony, left Washington for New York to sail for England Saturday. They were accompanied by their son, it was stated the marriage was "off."

Friends of the popular debutante asserted today that she had come to the realization that she did not care for the Britisher sufficiently to marry him, and consequently refused to go through with the ceremony, despite strenuous efforts to persuade her to do so which continued until the last minute when the guests were assembled.

About the Folks

Mrs. Alfred Baker who has been visiting her son in Poughkeepsie has returned to her home on Tompkins street.

Miss Celeste Keefe of Washington avenue, returned Wednesday night from Burlington, Vermont, where she was called by the death of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Keefe.

Mrs. Hewitt Boice of Fair street, who has been spending several months enjoying a cruise of the Mediterranean and trip down the Nile, has returned to here home on Fair street in this city. In spite of the marvelous and beautiful as well as interesting places visited, Mrs. Boice finds Kingston the most delightful place to her.

Dance at Lake Katrine.

There will be a dance at the Grange Hall at Lake Katrine on Friday, May 18. There will be music by the colored syncopators.

Pitt's Last Words.

Historians have quarreled over the last words of the English statesman, Pitt, but according to one commentator they have failed to go to the right source. The most point has been between "My country! how I leave my country" and "My country! how I love my country!" Sir Algernon West says: "Years after the event a cynic related how Pitt's old valet was (what is now called) 'interviewed' as to what his last words actually were. 'Do I remember them?' said he. 'Why, of course I do; as he was dying he turned to me and said, in a feeble voice, "Port, more port," and those were the last words he spoke.'"

Foggy.

"You are no gentleman," she wrote, "if you think I said such a thing as she said you said I said I had said." "Dear girl," he answered, "you must not think I think you think you must be the kind of girl I think you must be if you said such a thing as you said she said I said you said you had said." It seems he knew she knew he knew she said just what she said she heard he had heard her friend had heard him say he had heard her say, but with intuitive feminine tact she accepted the apology.

Argentina.

Argentina, or the Argentine Republic, has an area of 1,135,840 square miles and a population of about 7,500,000. The resources include forests of hardwood in the north, pine forests in the Andes region; coal is found; but the chief sources of wealth are agriculture and the pastures. Large numbers of sheep and cattle are raised; dairying is important, and the chief crops are wheat, linseed, oats, barley, rye, and Indian corn. In some parts sugar cane and fruits are cultivated.

MOST PITIFUL SIGHT IN LIFE is a man or woman who has no "will-power" as a result of nerve force exhaustion

All the physical suffering which may be caused by nervous irritability, headaches, backaches, indigestion, heart palpitation, etc., as a result of nerve force exhaustion, are nothing as compared with its mental effects upon the mind and "will power."

The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will" —who has noble impulses and desires but not enough "will power" to carry them through. The memory also fails, the judgment is bad and everything therefore seems to go wrong.

In such cases, do not take more stimulating medicines nor narcotic drugs (which only further injure your delicate nervous system) but what you need is something to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains strength-giving organic iron for the blood and may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. Over 4,000,000 people are using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed to every purchaser or the manufacturers will refund your money. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

Trimmings Hold Sway on Frocks

Embroidery in Odd Corners or Often Placed in Conspicuous Places.

One view of the spring gowns gives the impression that there is no decided change in silhouette. Upon further examination, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, the intricacies of detail and trimming begin to stand out. A frock may be as plain as a pipe stem to all outward appearance when in reality it is a combination of niceties so cleverly put together that they create a thing of great beauty.

Many of the gowns are cut on the simplest of all possible patterns—in essence the one-piece dress. Then they adopt some sort of original trimming. It is hard to say what is the favorite trimming. Embroidery, in the spring openings, has held the foremost place, but it is not put on in any stereotyped manner. It is tucked into odd corners or made to flume out in conspicuous places, and sometimes it goes so far as to cover a whole gown or coat, but it is best when done by hand with all that attention to stitchery which the feminine mind loves so well and which cannot help but make a costume the more beautiful.

On coats both long and short, there is much embroidery and it is not always of the sort that covers a garment. Indeed, the wide cuffs and the collar often will be covered with embroidery and the rest of the coat left plain. Again; there are unadorned lines on the coat, except the sleeves, and they will be resplendent with embroidery in the most vivid of colorings.

This idea extends itself to dresses, where the sleeves are often the sole trimming, done in the most stunning of embroidered patterns. One of these is made of shiny black satin with the severest of cuts, the bodice and the little sleeves cut to fit snugly. There are added puffed and full sleeves of white chiffon in two layers, to which have been added embroidery in an applique manner, some pieces of brightly colored silk with some long, effective stitches of gorgeous silken threads added to complete the embroidered effect. The patterns are large and splashing, and, against the background of black created by the severe folds of the dress, they show to their utmost a trimming which it would be hard to equal for artistic effect and smartness.

Belts and Waistcoats.

For three-piece suits there are embroidered belts and embroidered waistcoats. One lovely blouse was made of dark blue silk crepe with a whole bib front composed of a panel of Chinese embroidery, straight from a Chinatown shop. This, when the jacket was left open showed its colorful stitches with the best effect, and when the jacket was removed altogether it became an effective ornament for the blouse as a part of what appeared to be a complete and well-thought-out dress.

Embroideries of all countries are fashionable and the Egyptian is not more popular than the Indian or the Belgian or the Viennese, for that matter. Each one takes its place. Blouses are covered with embroidery and with all other sorts of trimming. Some of the latter waists to be worn with tailored skirts or suits are made from what seems to be two squares of silk, put together with rows of double hemstitching, edging wide hems. There may be a monogram somewhere on the front of the blouse to give it a mark of distinction and to add a touch of embroidery.

A long-waisted blouse designed as a possible part of a three-piece suit had medallions of silver embroidery worked at irregular intervals over its bright green surface. Then the sleeves, which were short, had edgings of that same silver embroidery and facings of deep purple silk just to add another contrast of color. This, after all, merely was a suggestion, for the purple tone showed only at the rarest intervals.

Ribbons are the most used of all trimmings, for there is hardly a gown of the present season that does not show a bit of ribbon somewhere. That ribbon may be only a facing more or less obscured or a series of loops and bows. But at any rate it cannot be denied that ribbon is an important factor in the making of all sorts and conditions of spring and summer frocks, whether its use be lavish or restrained.

Even the tailored suits are showing bindings of ribbon, and some of the heavier top coats have ribbon to form their edges and to tie them together, serving in the place of the buttons which one might expect.

Little Dresses Are Attractive.

In one instance a series of narrow cream lace flutings has been used to make the trimming of the neck and sleeves of a taffeta gown, giving it an appearance of the greatest charm and tying it up with the best of the modern fashions. The same sort of ruffling has been applied to the hat in rosettes that cover the ears.

The well-known "little" dresses are the ones which come out spectacularly with the use of ribbon as trimming. They may have nothing more than a binding of ribbon about the neckline and the sleeves, but that is always of a color in contrast to the one used for the gown. The effect of one shade against the other serves to provide the distinctive note that carries the gown past all criticism into the realm of smartness.

Loops of ribbon have been added to straight-line gowns in row after row, providing a bit of trimmed effect that, after all, being of the same color as the gown itself, serves only to create a little variety in the quality and tone of the costume. Not only dresses but coats have been handled in this manner. On one of the little short coats a series of ribbon loops forms the rolling collar, becoming as a frame for the face. More of the loops are applied as flaring cuffs for the tightly-fitted sleeves, and to the lower edges of the short jacket bunches of the same ribbon have been applied at the spots where pockets ought to be. As a matter of fact tiny pockets are hidden underneath the first two rows of ribbon loops, but they serve only as an excuse for repetition of the ribbon trimming. Long ribbon ends have been used to tie the coat together under the chin and to fly away almost to the bottom of the coat.

The severest sort of tailored coats are surprisingly tied together at the waist-line with large bows of ribbon and long swaying ends that form the only trimming for the wrap. Then there are ribbon facings which appear only on the under side of the little jackets and longer coats.

Ribbons for sashes are obvious enough, but in the way that they are used this season they seem to take on a new expression and meaning.

Sash Bows Are Used.

There are sash bows at the sides of costumes, there are those which appear directly in front and then there are those, wide and spreading, posed directly in the middle of the back only to drip long ends which in many cases serve to cover the surface of the skirt. These are used with dresses of all sorts so long as they are meant for dress or semi-dress occasions where the fussiness of ribbon sashes would not be considered out of place.

Facings of color have been used with effects of untold beauty. There will be seen a gown which is altogether sombre upon its first appearance but with facings of the most brilliant hue that show only when the wearer moves about or poses at this angle or that. They are made of soft silks and of chiffon and are applied to gowns meant for formal occasions as well as to those meant only for the strictest sort of street wear. Panels on skirts are faced with color. Necklines and the wide endings of sleeves show brilliant touches of facing. Wide, draped belts will be faced with brilliant colors which show only at rare intervals, and even the lower edges of skirts often will reveal that they have been faced with some color and material foreign to their own stuffs.

Contrasting materials have been wedded in the making of the modern gowns to the end that they form trimmings by their very combination. There will be a printed silk, to choose the most obvious example, against a plain and dark material the one forming the upper half and the other the lower half of the dress. Then there will be a brilliantly toned silk used with a black or deep blue silk or a tied and dyed fabric used along with something that is dull in tone, the two by reason of their contrast making the dress and its trimming without any thought of additional features. Indeed, this idea has been so universally liked and accepted that it can be seen in many guises.

Laces and organdies and all sorts of lingerie trimmings are important as trimmings for the newer gowns and they take us into the Victorian era by reason of the designs in which they have been made. There are many tiny lace ruffles, from those that wind round and round into rosettes to trim little hats or sweet girlish dresses, to those posed upon dresses in succeeding rows to make the trimming for the whole costume.

LAKE MOHONK TO PLAY K. H. S. TEAM

Friday Afternoon at the Fair Grounds In First Home Baseball Game of the Season for Local Team—Team In Good Shape.

Sentiment and dreams might be all right, but on a good spring day, when the sun is getting hot overhead and the people below are getting restless, there is nothing like a good game of some kind to give vent to a little hilarity. So believe the baseball men of Kingston high school. As just a part of the big program for Friday, they will line up against the team from Mohonk in the afternoon. They will supply the something to fill in the afternoon. At two o'clock, the Maroon and White team will play their first home game of the season, and it will be to make it a victory. Coach Perry has been drilling them hard and fast this week, and reports that they are in excellent condition. Bob Corregan and Charlie Howard will very likely be in the line-up again, which gives additional reason to expect a victory. The team is determined to do their part toward making the day a big one.

The game will be called at 2 o'clock sharp, and will be played at the Fair Grounds.

Thought for the Day.

Square people rather than square miles is what makes a country great.

Home of the Patriarch Abraham.

The Temple of the Moon, the home of the patriarch Abraham, recently uncovered in the Chaldees, may be between 6,000 and 7,000 years old. It is probably the oldest known edifice. The British museum and the museum of the University of Pennsylvania have charge of the research work in this section.

Explaining the Smell.

Betty likes to doll herself up as she makes free with her mother's toilet articles whenever she gets a chance. One evening there were several guests to dinner, and conscious that there was a strong odor of perfume in the air, Betty remarked, "If you smell anything, that's me."—Boston Evening Transcript.
